FALLS DEAD IN SPRINGFIELD HOTEL

William T. Ellston, of Exeter, is Victim of Paralysis

William T. Ellston, 71 years old, was stricken suddenly by paralysis of the heart, while talking with a friend in the reception room of the Metropolitan hotel in Springfield, Thursday, and fell dead.

Mr. Ellston went to Springfield from Exeter, Wednesday night en route to New Orleans where he expected to visit relatives. He had invited Mrs. L. M. Lord, of Springfield, an old friend of the family, to eat dinner with him at the Metropolitan and it was while talking with her that he was stricken.

The body will be sent to Exeter for interment.

The deceased was for many years engaged with the R. C. Stone Milling Company at Springfield. For several years he has been making his home with his son, Chas. Ellston at Exeter.

Miss Minnie Richards visited Thursday with friends at Purdy.

THE DAY AFTER

PASSENGER RATE INCREASE TO BE IN EFFECT DECEMBER 15

Washington, Nov. 26.—An indication that the Interstate Commerce Commission is going to heed the demands of the business interests of the country and do its share in the restoration of prosperity, was given by that body when it was announced that certain increases in passenger fares on the leading railroads of the country will become effective December 15. At least, this is the interpretation placed upon such action by the Washington administration.

This action by the commission is its first step toward alleviating the financial condition of the railroads of the country, whose plea for a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates based upon their inability to earn sufficient revenues at the present charge is now before the body.

While nothing is known as to what the commission will decide in that matter, the fact that increased passenger fares will be allowed to stand, leads many to believe that at least some increase in freight rates will be granted.

An Illustration

Two of our farmer friends dealt with the same merchant. The merchant was honest, but a poor bookkeeper.

One of our farmer friends always prided himself upon paying his bills with cash. The other kept his money in our bank and paid by check. The result? Easy enough. If the careless merchant presented a bill a second time to the one who had a cancelled check as a receipt, he had the merchant convinced at once, while the one who paid cash had to scratch his head and worry about it and sometimes thought he paid twice. It pays to pay by check.
